IN THE BOTEL CORRIDOR

The visit of Senator Hill to President Clere land vesterday and the appointment of Fourth

Assistant Postmaster General Maxwell were the two principal subjects discussed last evening in the hotel corridors. In a group of New York state democrats at the Arlington there was a consensus of opinion that the appointment of Mr. Maxwell meant war on the Hill machine known Albany Cleveland man to THE STAR representative, "is a vindication to him and as emphatic assertion that Mr. Cleveland is on top Superintendent Kimball of the life-saving service, Treasury Department, was this morning advised by the keeper of the Morris Island life-saving station, Charleston, S. C., of the stranding near the north jetty at the entrance to Charleston harbor, and of the subsequent total loss, of the schooner Kate V. Aiken, from seven were rescued by the life-saving service. The superintendent received information this morning of the stranding of the schooner Lillie F. Schmidt, with a crew of seven, ten miles south of the Ocracoke, N. C., life-saving station. All on board were saved by the breeches Gradually the stream of visitors to the Agricultural Department slackens and in the same ratio the business of the bureau assumes its routine character and the fact that a new administration is in charge is imperceptibly lost sight of. Secretary Morton only had a few callers today and most of these simply dropped in to leave their reof these simply dropped in to leave their respects. He had an opportunity to go through his mail, which was of a rather formidable size, and thew was obliged to leave for the White House to attend the meeting of the cabinet.

There were no new developments regarding the change in the personnel of the department, the Secretary evidently intending not to be too hasty in his selections, first making sure of the aptitude of the person for the place he is to fill. It is probable that in a day or; two Mr. Morton will announce some of his appointments.
